Three years ago in 2011 during this week there was the fifth largest earthquake recorded since 1900 under the Pacific Ocean off the coast of Japan. It was so powerful that the Earth was moved on its axis. Soon afterwards, a tsunami with 23 foot waves moving at nearly 600 miles per hour crashed into the coast of Japan, moving the coast of Japan 8 feet.

I could not help but notice during much of the footage how people quickly and instantly changed what they were doing that morning. They left behind businesses, homes, and automobiles, and in most cases, these items left the people behind as the material things were literally swept away.

Many perished in this event and no doubt many were swept back out to sea to never be found.

There are many spiritual lessons which can be learned from this event.

1. Life is fragile and death can come quickly. No one had any idea what was about to happen to them. They knew they were going to die— someday. They just didn't expect it to be last week.
2. Material things are unimportant. Within moments, houses and possessions were washed away. There were reports of entire villages being destroyed. People work hard, and often will go to extreme measures, to build up material possessions, but in a moment, they can be literally swept away.
3. We are richly blessed. Some of the most needed things of the people in the hardest hit areas are some of the things we take for granted. They have no electricity, no clean water, and extremely unsanitary conditions. We can go to the kitchen sink and get a virtually endless supply of what many of them need most, but do not have.
4. It's easy to overlook impending danger. There was no warning of the earthquake and little or no warning of the tsunami. Even ships on the ocean would not have noticed it because the force is underneath the surface of the water until it hits the shore.

So many things in life are like that. There are situations, associates, things we do, places we visit, that are filled with hidden spiritual dangers. If we are not watchful and vigilant, they will overwhelm us like flood waters.

5. People do not heed warnings. Many often complain when there are natural events such as this that the government did not do more to warn them. Even if the technology had been there to give advance warning, most people would not have evacuated thinking it would not affect them or it would not be as bad as they said it would be.

Consider all those who perish from drinking and driving or other substance abuse. The warnings have been issued for decades, yet people continue to ignore them, thinking it cannot happen to them.

The Lord warns us over and over in the pages of the Bible of spiritual dangers, yet most do not heed those warnings.

The loss of life in the earthquake and tsunami is indeed staggering and tragic, but the real tragedy is knowing how many died out of the Lord. We are reminded how important it is that we take the gospel to the world before even more perish in the overwhelming flood waters of sin. —Marty Edwards❖

In light of the lesson of being prepared, this past Sunday and Monday we had our largest snow in years and late in the season being in March. Even at services last Sunday we talked about what to do to be prepared with food, water, extra fuel, blankets, etc. We had fully expected the power to go out with impending ice, but, thankfully it never came to pass. We had a large amount of sleet and snow, but not the ice which would have caused the power outages.

It did not hurt whatsoever that we were prepared yet did not use the items we gathered for a power outage. The items will be used later in regular use or during a Spring storm. We should prepare even if there is the possibility the emergency does not come to pass.

How much more then should we prepare for that which is certain— death. Many who would quickly prepare for a weather event which is very uncertain never give a thought to preparing for that which is guaranteed and will come to pass.

Let's all prepare and be ready for when we do leave this life. It of a certainty will come to pass. —Marty Edwards❖
